

Resource Management – Career Progression Paths

Everything is connected. The core program is often used to leverage other funding sources to help communities manage multiple resources: fish, habitat, species at risk, water, cumulative effects, and more. Other resource programs may similarly be used for forestry, lands, contaminated sites, migratory birds and wildlife. Enabling managers and technicians to follow multiple career path options can help build Indigenous resource management capacity.

Managerial- and officer-level resource positions often have duties far beyond technical matters, such as: community engagements, consultations and communications, education and cultural activities (e.g., fish camps), human resources, program management, and funding proposal writing and reporting.

*Identify partnering departments and agencies, e.g., ECCC, NRCan, etc.